PREAMBLE

“Sport is part of every man and woman's heritage and its absence can never be compensated for.”

Pierre de Coubertin

From a sociological, economic and organisational point of view, among many others, the benefits of sport for society are undeniable. Sport is an important driver of human values such as team spirit, tolerance, solidarity and loyalty.

On a myriad of occasions Europe's institutions have recognised the importance of sport for the European Union as a whole. In 2000, the Council of Europe acknowledged the importance of sport in European society and the value of addressing sport when designing common policies that apply to all the citizens of the European Union.

In its White Paper on Sport published in 2007, the European Commission tackles the main problems associated with sport. The Paper's objective is to provide strategic guidelines on the role of sport in Europe, encourage debate on specific problems related thereto and enhance the importance of sport to fuel solidarity among states of the European Union.

However, it was not until 2009, with the entry into force of the Treaty of Lisbon, that the European Union first acquired specific competences in sport-related matters. Article 165 of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union¹ (TFEU) refers to EU sports policy: “The Union shall contribute to the promotion of European sporting issues, while taking account of the specific nature of sport, its structures based on voluntary activity and its social and educational function”. Furthermore, article 6 of the TFEU refers to sport as a political area in which the European Union is competent to support, coordinate or supplement the actions of Member States.

The European Parliament is of the view that there is a growing need for the EU to deal with sports matters within a framework of full respect for the principle of subsidiarity. Parliament is aware that sport itself constitutes an important social phenomenon and a public good and is working on this topic together with the other EU Institutions. For this reason, through its permanent committees, it has drawn up a report on the European dimension in sport based on the communication “Developing the European dimension in sport”², which follows the same structure as the White Paper, referring to the societal role of sport, the economic dimension of sport and the organisation of sport, among other matters.

In recent years, ACES Europe’s activity, importance and influence have increased substantially. This phenomenon has raised ACES Europe’s media profile and reinforced its public image, making it necessary for the institution to address its growing accountability vis-à-vis the public authorities, particularly in Europe, and society at large.

These regulations constitute ACES Europe’s response to the demand to tailor its actions and public activities to an established set of rules that give the entity the credibility it deserves. Their aim is to strengthen the institution by providing a solid basis for action that will enable it to fulfil the purpose for which it was founded, this being none other than to promote physical exercise and sport at all levels of society.

This document, which establishes and explains how ACES Europe awards the European Capital, Community, City and Town of Sport distinction, is an indispensable part of ACES Europe’s corporate governance structure. Furthermore, it aims to strengthen the procedures associated with the awards granted by ACES Europe.

ACES EUROPE

Since its inception in 1999, ACES Europe seeks to promote sport among all the citizens of the European Union, particularly disadvantaged groups, children, the elderly and the disabled, among others.

ACES Europe's goal is also to encourage private and public initiative in order to increase support for sport, not only from a professional point of view, but also as a channel for social cohesion and to improve the health and quality of life of citizens.

The goals that ACES Europe pursues for cities that are candidates for or that have been awarded the European Capital, Community, City and Town of Sport distinction are five-fold:

- Enjoyment in exercise.
- Willingness to achieve.
- Sense of community.
- Learning fair play.
- Improvement of health.

ACES Europe also has the support of other European institutions. The White Paper on Sport, a document that governs sports legislation in the European Union and highlights the importance of sport for all EU citizens, recognises the activity carried out by ACES Europe and the distinctions awarded during the annual gala ceremony held in the European Parliament, as reflected in article 50, in which the European Commission expresses its support for the future development of ACES Europe: "The Commission will also seek to promote greater European visibility at sporting events. The Commission supports the further development of the European Capitals of Sport initiative".

For ACES Europe, support from European institutions constitutes its most valuable credential and represents one more reason to continue to carry out all of the proposed activities aimed at furthering its goals.

ACES Europe also has the endorsement of two important associations: The EGFA (Europarlimentary Group of Friends of ACES) and the GCE (Groupe Consultatif Européen). Both associations are a source of ongoing and steadfast support within the European Parliament, guaranteeing ACES Europe's visibility within the highest European institutions. Both associations are presided and composed over by Europarlimentary members.

EUROPEAN CAPITALS AND CITIES OF SPORT FEDERATION

ACES Europe's solid footing in the European institutional landscape and its firm belief in the legitimacy of its objectives spur ACES Europe and its members on to continue in their endeavour, namely the promotion of sport in society.
